

chain-orientational disorder (in polymer crystals)

Structural disorder resulting from the statistical coexistence within the crystals of identical chains with opposite orientations.

A typical example is provided by the up-down statistical coexistence of anticlinal chains in the same crystal structure.

P.B. 80