

chemical laser

A continuous wave or pulsed laser in which the excitation and population inversion of the emitting species result from a chemical reaction. Typical examples are HF and DF lasers emitting many lines in the IR region.

1996, 68, 2232