

colloid osmotic pressure (Donnan pressure)

The pressure difference which has to be established between a colloidal system and its equilibrium liquid to prevent material transfer between the two phases when they are separated by a membrane, permeable to all components of the system, except the colloidal ones.

1972, 31, 615