

liquid-phase loading (in chromatography)

A term used in partition chromatography to express the relative amount of the liquid stationary phase in the column packing. It is equal to the mass fraction (%) of liquid stationary phase in the total packing (liquid stationary phase plus support).

1993, 65, 831