

optically active polymer

Polymer capable of rotating the polarization plane of a transmitted beam of linear-polarized light.

Note 1: See also optical activity.

Note 2: The optical activity originates from the presence of chiral elements in a polymer such as chiral centers or chiral axes due to long-range conformational order in a polymer (helicity) (see also helicity).

2004, 76, 900