

radial elution (radial development) or circular elution (circular development) (in planar chromatography)

A mode of operation in which the sample is spotted at a point source at or near the middle of the plane and is carried outward in a circle by the mobile phase, also applied at that place.

1993, 65, 829