

selective (in analysis)

A term which expresses qualitatively the extent to which other substances interfere with the determination of a substance according to a given procedure.

1983, 55, 555