

selectivity (in analysis)

1. (qualitative): The extent to which other substances interfere with the determination of a substance according to a given procedure.
2. (quantitative): A term used in conjunction with another substantive (e.g. constant, coefficient, index, factor, number) for the quantitative characterization of interferences.

1983, 55, 555; see also 1990, 62, 2174