

thermoacoustimetry

A technique in which the characteristics of imposed acoustic waves are measured as a function of temperature after passing through a substance (and/or its reaction product(s)) whilst the substance is subjected to a controlled temperature program.

1985, 57, 1740